Think about the last group trip you went on. Everyone took photos but afterward sharing them becomes a mess, especially when half the group is on iPhone and the other half is on Android. Photos end up scattered across AirDrop, WhatsApp, Google Drive, and random links, and someone usually has to manage the whole thing.

FRAME fixes that. Our app automatically creates shared albums by detecting people and moments from an event and gathering the relevant photos together, while still giving everyone control over what they share. The best part, its available across iOS and Android.
